THE PROBLEM

Small firms are invisible in a crowded internet

The internet is saturated

PPC, directories and SEO are dominated by bigger companies with bigger budgets. Small firms pay more per click and rank lower every year.

No leads in their hand

Most small businesses prospect blind. They have no fresh, ready-to-contact opportunities, so they hear about new work late, or not at all.

They cannot compete

Big players outpace small firms. Business goes to whoever has the biggest budget.

So smart small firms are returning to what still wins: direct, personal outreach - a real letter or an early phone call. It's about speed and personal touch, not budget.

Direct mail and personal outreach are seeing a revival as online noise grows

The first firm to respond wins most local jobs - speed beats spend
